

Types of Grass

Many of you don't want to see bare ground around your garden. You want your garden to be green and prefer it to be covered with lawn. While some of you prefer this for your children to play on, some desire it for picnicking or sunbathing.

If you want to cover your garden with grass, you have to pay great importance to choosing the correct type. You have to keep in mind the position of your garden, whether it is shaded or not, and local water conditions. Here we will go through the types of grass that are used in North Cyprus. These are: Australian Grass (kikiu), Bermuda and Fesluka. We use these types according to the position of the garden and your taste.

Australian Grass (Kikiu).

This is the most suitable grass for the climate of Cyprus. It is easy to care for and is resistant to clover and drought compared to the others. It has thick leaves and tends to fill empty spaces easily. Special care should be shown to infestations though. The timing and use of insecticides is crucial for a perfect lawn. In winter it is yellow for a short time for hibernation. It is not possible to plant this in winter.

Fesluka.

This is a type of grass with a magnificent vision in dark green. It needs more care than other types, but you can plant this type in the winter.

Bermuda.

This is a long-lasting type of grass with a thin and green appearance. It withers rarely and it is easy to grow. If cutting and insecticides are applied at the proper time it keeps its beauty for many years. Through the winter season though, there may appear some small weeds. Nevertheless they easily disappear in the spring. As it is not a type of grass that spreads easily you need to plant it close to avoid gaps.
